The Client

The Northern Territory Anti-Discrimination Commission (ADC) was established in 1993 to administer the Anti-Discrimination Act. The ADC fulfils the Anti-Discrimination Commissioner's functions in two main ways, by handling complaints made under the Act and through the provision of public education and training.

The Background

The Northern Territory Anti-Discrimination Commission needed provision of an EDRMS system designed to assist ADC to develop a reporting mechanism including the legacy data.

The Challenge

Migrate data from Filemaker into HP TRIM.

The Information Proficiency Solution

Previously, ADC used a combination of systems and processes, resulting in inefficiency. To assist ADC to develop a reporting mechanism based around a single centralised records management system, Information Proficiency migrated data from Filemaker into HP TRIM.

Business Benefits

Provision of a single, centralised records management system driving efficiencies across the organisation. Migration of legacy data into HP TRIM provided a range of benefits to the organisation including the provision of a single reporting system.
